

Essential Eligibility Criteria

The mission of BroadFutures is to advance the inherent potential of young adults with learning disabilities in the workforce through partnerships that foster independence, self-advocacy and successful employment. We envision a transformative and inclusive workforce where all individuals, regardless of disability, have an equal opportunity to succeed.

Given that we are a career readiness program, we do not expect interns to engage in extensive physical activity. While we encourage regular exercise as a part of maintaining a healthy lifestyle, we do not include this as part of our training program. Should we incorporate a more intensive physical activity into our program, it will be volunteer-based unless otherwise stated, and those with physical limitations or disabilities will be exempt from the expectation.

The following are the Essential Eligibility Criteria for the BroadFutures program. If there are any concerns about whether a potential applicant will meet these criteria, please reach out via email to info@broadfutures.org or by telephone at (202) 521-4304.

Essential Eligibility Criteria:

5. Yoga and Mindfulness

- a. As part of our holistic training, we incorporate yoga and mindfulness.

6. Drama

- a. We incorporate drama exercises and role-playing into our curriculum to practice skills learned in training. Interns must be willing to engage in role-playing and improvisation exercises when asked to do so by the drama instructor or BroadFutures staff.
